you [Music] I the future of Freedom Foundation and this is episode 11 of my series on the JFK assassination when President Kennedy was taken into trauma room one at Dallas Parkland Hospital the physicians naturally immediately went into emergency mode assessing the situation and determining where Kennedy needed the most urgent treatment for example one of the physicians took a scalpel and performed a tracheotomy on the president cutting a very small thin cut right across the front of his neck where he inserted a breathing tube but in the process of making this assessment one of the physicians said to the others hey fellas you need to come and take a look at this and so they went around to where the head of the president was and his head was slightly lifted and they could all see a massive like two inch in diameter hole in the lower region of President Kennedy's skull and what is known as the occipital region of the skull they saw that coming out of this wound was the part of the brain called the cerebellum which is the lower back part of the brain at this point they all knew that it was over they knew that there was nothing they could do to save this man's life nobody can survive a wound of that nature and so for all practical purposes it was really just a matter of waiting for the president to die and sure enough within a half-hour so President Kennedy had passed away about an hour later two of the physicians dr. Clark Kent the chief of Neurosurgery of Parkland and dr. Malcolm Perry held a press conference and at

Perry held a press conference and at this press conference they described two wounds that they had seen on President Kennedy one was a small bullet sized wound on the front of President Kennedy's neck over which the small tracheotomy had been cut and they described that and emphasized that that was an entry wound which of course would imply a shot having been fired from the front and then they talked about this large wound in the back of President Kennedy's head now the real one of the reasons why the size of wounds are important is that they help physicians or pathologists discover which are the entry points of which are the exit points for bullets when a bullet enters a person's body it enters with a very small hole essentially the size of the bullet but as its proceeding through the body it's pushing mass in front of it in the case of a head wound is pushing brain mass in front of it and so when it exits on the other side it exits with a blowout on the other side now if you want to get a good sense of what the wound looked like and where it was located there are several presentations by doctor Robert McClelland online one of the treating physicians speeches presentations interviews and the like and then there's also a great book called trauma room one by dr. Charles Crenshaw that talks about the wound in the occipital region of the skull now as you can imagine there were several witness as well as everybody knows there were several witnesses in Dealey Plaza where the assassination took place and one of these was a man named Charles Brehm and he was located in the center part of the plaza to the left rear of the limousine the presidential limousine in other words the limousine had already passed him by and he stated that when President Kennedy was hit in the head he saw for lack of a better term exit saw for lack of a better term exit debris coming out of the back of President Kennedy's head and landing in the grass near him another witness was Marilyn Willis she was also behind at the limousine and she said she also saw stuff coming out of the back of President Kennedy's head her daughter said she saw the president said just the back of the president said just blow and then there were two motorcycle policemen BJ Martin and Bobby Hargis who were riding jointly to the left rear of the limousine and when the shot hit President Kennedy they were splattered or their cycles were splattered with exit debris now all of you I'm sure familiar with the Zapruder film Abraham Zapruder was the Dallas businessman goes out to Dealey Plaza on the day of the assassination with his brand-new movie camera and sure enough he ends up filming the assassination and there's the scene in in the film where President Kennedy gets shot in the head and his wife Jacqueline immediately starts going back to the trunk on the trunk of the car the speculation is that she saw stuff coming out of the back of her husband's head and she was going back to retrieve it obviously terrible shock but at the same time there's a Secret Service agent named Clint Hill who's coming from a follow up car and grabbing on to the end of the presidential limousine he succeeds in doing that and then he pushes Mrs. Kennedy back in her seat and then he lies down and the body of the president trying to protect the president for many more shots as we all know that's the job of a Secret Service agent to to put himself in front of the president even giving up his own life Hill stated that in the six or seven or eight minutes that it took to get to Parkland Hospital he was looking at this large wound in the lower back of President Kennedy's it when the limousine got to Parkland Hospital the limousine got to Parkland Hospital the hospital personnel were there ready to assist the president to get out of the car and into the hospital and one of these people was a nurse named Ina Beau Run and she testified or stated that she saw this small bullet sized wound in the front of President Kennedy's neck and then when she put her hand behind his head to help him get out of the car she could feel the large wound in the back of the head another nurse named Audrey Belle who was in the treating room trauma room one helping the physicians she later attested to the fact that the president had this large wound in the lower back of his head on the day after the assassination there was a medical student named Billy Harper who was walking around Dealey Plaza and he happened to find a bone fragment it just so happened that his uncle was a pathologist there in Dallas at Methodist Hospital so he took the bone fragment to his uncle and his uncle proceeded to put a small team of pathologists together and they summoned the hospital medical photographer they took a picture of the bone fragment which became known as the Harper fragment and this team of pathologists analyzed the bone fragment and concluded that it was occipital bone which would make sense since the wound was in the occipital region of the skull now at this point it's worthwhile recalling the testimony of Sondra Spencer Sondra Spencer as you'll recall from a previous episode was the U.S. Navy petty officer that was working in the in the US Navy's photography lab in Washington DC she had a top-secret security clearance she dealt with classified photographs she developed photo craft including autopsy photographs she worked closely with the White House as I indicated in that earlier segment it would be virtually impossible to find a more credible more impossible to find a more credible more competent witness than Sondra Spencer well she was someone to testify before the assassination records Review Board in the 1990s now just as a review the AR RB was called into existence it was a commission to enforce the JFK Records Act which mandated that all federal agencies the military the CIA the Secret Service FBI all of them released their JFK related records to the public after some 30 years after the assassination now Sondra Spencer appeared let me let me first say something about the AR RB that I haven't pointed out before and that you might not be familiar with when the JFK Records Act was enacted and they brought in the ARB to enforce it Congress included a provision in this law for some reason that absolutely prohibited the ARB from investigating or reinvestigating any aspect of the Kennedy assassination their mandate was strictly limited to getting documents released and the Governing Board of the ARR be strictly enforced this restriction they made it very clear that if any staff member violated it and began investigating and reinvestigating any aspect of the Kennedy assassination he would be subject to being immediately terminated well Sondra Spencer is summoned to testify before the ARR be not to investigate or reinvestigate the Kennedy assassination but in their words to clarify the record and she told an astounding story as I indicated in the previous segment it was a story she had kept secret for some thirty years she had been led to believe that it was classified top secret and recall that we talked about the culture of the military that when somebody in the military gets access to classified information he is expected to keep it secret for the rest of his life take it to the grave with him and that's what Sondra Spencer had done for thirty years or so done for thirty years or so so she appears before the AR RB and the general counsel for the AR RB presents her with the official autopsy photographs for President Kennedy she closely examines them and then looks at the General Counsel and says no sir those are not the photo I was asked to develop the autopsy photographs for President Kennedy on the weekend of the assassination and I can tell you that those are not the photographs that I developed the ones I developed showed a massive wound in the back of President Kennedy's head those photographs show the back of his head to be intact you [Music]
